Travelling to Deventer

Travel to Saxion by train*

When you arrive in The Netherlands by plane, in most cases you will arrive at Schiphol Amsterdam airport. The best way to travel to Deventer is by train. In that case you need to take the direct intercity train to Deventer and Enschede. This train leaves one time per hour. There are more trains, but in that case you need to switch trains in Amersfoort.

The journey to Deventer will take approximately 1½ hours. Most of the Intercity trains have free wifi available, please find more information about travel facilities on the webpage of the NS, the Dutch railway services: NS webpage. For general information you can also check the NS homepage.

**Please plan your travelling here or via the NS app you can download in your Appstore.*

How to buy a ticket/card and travel with public transport?

You are able to use your bank card, credit card or smart phone to check in and out travelling second class (without discounts or subscriptions). Hold your contactless bank or credit card, or smart phone up to the card reader or gate and – beep! – you’ve checked in. When you arrive at the place you need to be, check out the same way. It’s that easy. Do not forget to check out at your destination! Please find out more about this via the following website: <https://ovpay.nl/en/how-it-works>

The other option is to buy a single use chip card or ticket at one of the yellow ticket machines with the blue sign and white NS logo across or at the NS Tickets & Service desks. A 2nd class ticket for the train is around € 22,- for Deventer. Most of the times you will be able to find an employee of NS at the train station at Schiphol airport who is able to help you.
